Thank you Clyde

IT is common for accountants to be part of companies as trustees , there are also many accountants who are directors and shareholders of other companies their own .

The whole purpose of the companies act is to give transparency .

It would therefore appear that you are the director and share holder of this company you are the only person who has consents filed with the companies office.

The companies register is actually one of the few registers which is instant and it therefore follows that you are now covering arse and getting some documentation in place , The delay is that you now have to back date some documents and get the next person to front this sham to sign it then upload it.

It's a bugger when you are talking to some one who knows the system.. they are not as easily sucked in as the ignorant.

Could you please advise me of the names and addresses of the real owners of the company or will I have to ask the accountants association if what has occurred is kosher.

Regards
Grace Haden

Hi Grace

No it is very common for accountants to appear as directors and shareholders for client companies for a variety of reasons. In every case we act in good faith with clients. As you can see we are a well established Australian network who pride themselves on providing excellent client service.

The details you are requesting should be available in the next day or so from the companies office. We are not interested in being associated with anything which may affect our reputation.

Thanks
Clyde

Thanks for that Clyde could you please tell me who the directors and share holders are I want to be able to contact them and tell them that they are less than transparent and that "I don't take marketing calls" means just that.

I note that there have been no documents filed with the companies office for any change or sale in the company.. are your clients a trust which you are holding a deed for perhaps.. if so could you please advise who the trustees are.

I was of the understanding that the person named on the company's web site was the director and shareholder and that accountants only set up companies on behalf of people and when they set them up in their own name than they are the director and share holder of that company.

I will add this to the blog in the interest of transparency .. we all look forward to your reply

Hello Grace

As you can see we are accountants. We setup companies and temporarily allow ourselves to be the head office and director until it is transferred to the actual owner. We have resigned from this company as the head office and director.

Thanks

Mr Young

I received a marketing call from one of your companies this morning. The girl didn't seem to know what "I don't do marketing calls means"

Since she persisted I took the trouble to find out who was behind this less than transparent company and found that it was you.

I am an anti corruption specialist and am very concerned about the intrusion of people's lives by marketing calls seeking people to subscribe especially when the company is hiding behind a trading name and had I not asked for the company number I would not have located you

Please see the link below for the blog I have put up about the incident and the connection to William Buck.

I would like an explanation which of course I am prepared to publish
